MOORISH LEGTURE.

Dr. John Saadi, a Syrian, Speaks of His Experiences

AS A MISSIONARY IN MOROCCO.

How the Self-Sustaining Missionary Work is Carried On-The Condition of the Women in That Country. The Slave Traffic Still Carried On Unmolested.

A very novel, interesting and instructive lecture was heard last evening at the Third Presbyterian church on Jacob street, South Side, by a large audience by Dr. John Saadi, of Syria, Asia, who for many years has been a self-sustaining missionary in Morocco in Africa. The subject of his talk was 'The One Hundred and Ninety Million Followers of Mohamed," and it was well handled by the lecturer. Dt. Saadi was formerly an interpreter attached to the British army that was sent to the relief of the noble and illfated Gordon, who met his doom at Khartoum in the Egyptian Soudan, and Khartoum in the Egyptian Soudan, and a portion of his talk was about this expedition, which failed to accomplish its purpose. The main part of the lecture, however, was about the condition of affairs in Morocco, where Mohammedanism reigns supreme, Dr. Saadi pursued his labors there under the guise of an oculist, which helped him in his more important object of revealing to the blinded people of that country the true religion of Jesus Christ. He related the novel way by which he forced patients who came to him for the purpose of having their eyes treated, read the gospel. He showed the charts which he used there to test the eyes, and instead of, having A B C in different sizes of type on them, he had them printed with extracts from the Bible, thus forcing the Mohamedan to read the word of God. After having tested the eyes by the chart he would have the patient read a half hour from his Bible, in the native language, and in such a way many converts to Christianity were made. As an occulist, too, he secured access to places where an avowed missionary could not possibly go.

An interesting part of his talk related

An interesting part of his talk related to the condition of the Moorish women. He said that the father is always disappointed and disgusted when he finds that he has a daughter, whereas had the child been a boy he would have been delighted. The daughter grows up almost utraly pended and at the see that he has a daughter, whereas had the child been a boy lie would have been delighted. The daughter grows up almost utterly neglected, and at the age of twelve, usually, the father looks around for a man to whom he can marry the girl. The girl then becomes a wife to a man whom she has never before met, and to whom her like or dislike does not enter into the question. The man is entitled to four wives, and if he tires of them he can divorce all of them by simply telling them to return to their parents, and then marry again if he so dosires. He said the condition of the women in Morocco is to-day worse than slavery. He spoke in praise of the herole American women who have left their houses to do what they can for these unfortunate creatures.

Morocco, he said, is the only country in northern Africa which allows the slave traffic to go on unmolested, and the most shameful part of the condition is that the sultan receives 10 per cent of the proceeds derived from this disgraceful traffic in human bodies and souls.

After he had concluded talking, Dr. Saadi exhibited three Moorish children, two boys and one girl. The girl, he said, who looked to be about twelve years old, was at the age when she should be married in her country, and the older of the boys, about sixteen or seventeen, would be thought to be a likely candidate for her master and husband. He then went through a mock Moorish marriage ceremony, which was greatly enjoyed by the audionee. The woman, he said, cannot look for an existence in heaven, but the man has the pleasing prospect of seventy wives and 30,000 servants.

After the lecture a collection was taken up. Dr. Saadi is making a lecture tour of this country for the purpose of raising funds to enter Jefferson college, Philadelphia, where he will study medicine, which will be a great and almost invaluable aid to him in his missionary labors in Morocco.

A Wondergul Escape.

Yesterday morning about 9 o'clock, Jerry O'Brien, a 'carpenter who was working on George McMechens house on Eoff street, slipped from his position on a scaffold forty feet above the ground and fell. While on his rapid descent he struck the corner cave of an addition, bowe about tweet of an addition. adjoining house about twenty feet above the ground. This seemed to decrease the rapidity of his fall, and he alighted on the ground on his feet, and beyond being stunned for about half an hour, seemed to be otherwise unhurt. It was certainly a miraculous escape from instant death.

He Wanted the Dice.

James Johnson, the young man arrested the other day for loltering on the streets at night with suspicious characters, paid his fine yesterday and was released. He went to police headquarters after some of his belongings, and wanted among other things the return wanted among other things the return of a set of "skin" dice. When the po-lice refused to give them back, Johnson became very angry, and had to be or-ed out of the building.
